3. Scholarly and Artistic Work

a) Scholarly Publications (each category in chronological order starting with the most recent; numbered consecutively across categories)

Book Chapters

1. Lawrence Nelson & E. Ramirez, "Can Suicide in the Elderly Be Rational?" in Rational Suicide in the Elderly: Clinical, Ethical and Sociocultural Aspects, edited by R. McCue & M. Balasubramaniam, Springer (2017), 1-22.

An examination of the conceptual (e.g., what is suicide? What does "rational" mean?) and ethical issues involved when elderly persons express (particularly to mental health clinicians who are increasingly encountering such patients) a desire to end their lives due to profound dissatisfaction with their physical and/or mental functioning, current relationships, or experiences apart from terminal illness or chronic pain. Some of these elderly individuals report they are "tired of life." Several case studies are discussed. 43 references, approx. 10,700 words.

I was invited by the editors of this volume to write this and the rational suicide and the law chapter after they attended an invited presentation I made on these subjects at the 2015 annual meeting of the Association for Geriatric Psychiatry. I asked Erick Ramirez to work on the chapter with me given his expertise in the philosophy and ethics of mental health. We shared the research and writing on this chapter equally. Both of these chapters were peer reviewed by the book editors and editors at Springer. This chapter is currently the one in the book that has been downloaded (either by individual purchase or subscription) the most frequently at 740 (per bookmetrix.com). This book has been reviewed three times in the mental health literature.¹ With respect to this particular chapter one reviewer noted that "it usefully set out criteria for what might count as rational in this regard, which were then put to the test in Chapter 2." Google scholar search: 3 citations.² Researchgate search: 1 citation and 22 reads.

2. Lawrence Nelson, "Rational Suicide and the Law," in Rational Suicide in the Elderly: Clinical, Ethical and Sociocultural Aspects, edited by R. McCue & M. Balasubramaniam, Springer (2017), 33-44.

A review and analysis of the legal considerations facing therapists who encounter an elderly patient who express a wish to end her life and who does not exhibit a recognized mental illness. 19 references, approx. 5600 words.

This chapter has been downloaded (either by individual purchase or subscription) 672 times (per bookmetrix.com).

3. Lawrence Nelson, "ACLU v. Catholic Health Care: An Inquiry into Disputes over Previability Pregnancy Termination," in Conscience and Catholic Health Care, edited by D. DeCosse & T. Nairn, Orbis Books (2017), 121-138.

A non-partisan ethical, legal, and policy analysis of litigation filed by the ACLU against the US Conference of Catholic Bishops and a Catholic hospital system alleging inadequate reproductive care for women. 47 references, 74 footnotes, approx. 6700 words.

This paper was written as part of a conference sponsored by the Markkula Center for Applied Ethics and the Catholic Health Association on the subject of conscience and Catholic health care to which I was invited by Prof. DeCosse. It was revised prior to publication in response to the peer review of the editors. This book received honorable mention from the Catholic Press Association's 2018 Book Award competition.

4. Lawrence Nelson, "Legal Personhood, Prenatal Humans, and Feticide Laws," in In the Sphere of the Personal: New Perspectives in the Philosophy of Persons, edited by J. Beauregard & S. Smith, Vernon Press (2016), 165-178.

A study of why prenatal humans should not be considered legal persons with fundamental rights, why the unborn deserve legal protection from wrongful killing by third parties, and why it is ethically and practically problematic for certain philosophical conceptions of personhood to be used to determine legal personhood. 24 references, 32 footnotes, approx. 5000 words.

I presented a peer reviewed paper with this title at the 13th International Conference on Persons in the summer of 2015 and submitted a revised version to the editors in response to their call for papers that might be included in a published volume. This revised version of the original paper was accepted for publication after peer review by the editors.

5. J. Faranoff & Lawrence Nelson, "Ethical Issues in the Perinatal Period," in Care of the High Risk Neonate, edited by A. Faranoff, 6th edition, Elsevier/Saunders (2012), 535-542 (revised version).

A modestly revised version of the chapter I wrote that appeared in the 5th edition of this book in 2001. Dr. Faranoff initiated most of the changes, and I added some changes and collaborated on the final wording of all.

6. Lawrence Nelson, "Disability Rights and Wrongs in the Terri Schiavo Case," in Ethics, Politics and Death in the 21st Century: The Strange, Sad Case of Terri Schiavo, edited by Kenneth Goodman, Oxford University Press (2010), pp. 158-190.

Invited chapter in a volume peer reviewed by the publisher that discusses the ethics of the involvement of disability rights groups in the Schiavo case and offers a critique of the methods and rhetoric of these groups; one of ten chapters in the book; written during my 2005-2006 sabbatical leave.

7. Lawrence Nelson, "Preimplantation Diagnosis," in A Textbook of Perinatal Medicine, edited by A. Kurjak, 2006 edition, CRC Press-Parthenon Publishers, pp. 179-189.

Medical textbook chapter invited and reviewed by the editors of the “Ethical and Legal Dimensions” section, Profs. Frank Chervenak and Laurence McCullough; a survey of the ethical problems raised by preimplantation genetic diagnosis including the marketing of PGD services, informed consent, sex selection, and the moral status of extracorporeal human embryos.

8. Lawrence Nelson, "Ethical Issues in the Perinatal Period," Chapter 19 in Care of the High Risk Neonate, edited by M. Klaus and A. Faranoff, 5th edition, W.B. Saunders (2001), 536-545 (revised and expanded version).

Invited chapter in a medical textbook surveying the ethics of medical treatment of critically ill newborns, especially those born prematurely, and commenting on developments since the previous edition.

9. Lawrence Nelson, "Ethical Issues in the Perinatal Period," Chapter 19 in Care of the High Risk Neonate, edited by M. Klaus and A. Faranoff, 4th edition, W.B. Saunders (1993), 464-470.

Invited chapter in a medical textbook surveying the ethics of medical treatment of critically ill newborns, especially those born prematurely; includes discussion of the significance of the federal “Baby Doe laws” for neonatology practice.

10. Lawrence Nelson & Marty Jessup, "Advocacy, Ethics, and the Law," in Drug Dependency in Pregnancy: Managing Withdrawal, edited by M. Jessup, California Department of Health Services, Maternal and Child Health Branch (1992), 269-284.

Invited chapter discussing the ethical and legal aspects of drug abuse and use by pregnant women and the effects of drugs on unborn humans; I did all of the ethical and legal research and wrote the clear majority of the manuscript text, while Ms. Jessup contributed the clinical information used in the paper.

11. Lawrence Nelson, "And the Truth Shall Set You Free: The Case of Baby Boy Cory," in Ethics at the Bedside, edited by Charles Culver, M.D., University Press of New England (1990), 40-70.

Invited chapter in a book collecting reports of cases by the clinical bioethics consultants involved in them; discusses a case in which I was retained by the parents of a prematurely born infant to consult on the ethical and legal raised by the parents’ wishes and the views of the health care providers on forgoing life-sustaining treatment.

Articles

12. Lawrence Nelson, “Response to Open Peer Commentaries on Provider Conscientious Refusal of Abortion, Obstetrical Emergencies, and Criminal Homicide Law,” American Journal of Bioethics, Vol.18, #9, 2018, W9-W10.

A response, reviewed by the editor, to the 10 Open Peer Commentaries (these are peer reviewed by the editor) on my target article “Provider Conscientious Refusal of Abortion, Obstetrical Emergencies, and Criminal Homicide Law.” 5 references, approx. 1340 words. See below for more about this journal.

13. Lawrence Nelson, “Provider Conscientious Refusal of Abortion, Obstetrical Emergencies, and Criminal Homicide Law,” American Journal of Bioethics, Vol.18, #7, 2018,

An argument that (1) conscientious refusals to end a pregnancy in a life-threatening emergency can constitute murder or reckless homicide; (2) such refusals are not immunized from criminal liability by the constitutional right to the free exercise of religion; and (3) conscientious objection to abortion statutes that either expressly or implicitly confer immunity from criminal liability on providers who refuse to perform abortions in an emergency are unconstitutional. 54 references, 2 footnotes, approx. 5400 words. 10 citations (the peer-reviewed Open Peer Commentaries published in the same issue as the article).

AJOB is a refereed, national journal of research in bioethics; acceptance rate: circa 16%. Ranked #2 journal for issues in ethics and legal aspects (Scimago Journal and Country Ranking). According to the 2016 report of the Bioethics Research Library at Georgetown University, it is the #3 ranked bioethics journal. 2018 journal impact factor: 5.8, 5 year impact factor: 6.789 (InCites Journal Citation Reports). According to a ranking produced by bioethicist Udo Schuklenk based on 2019 Google Scholar metrics using a “h-5 index” and a “h5-median,”¹ AJOB is the #4 bioethics journal. It is noteworthy that I had to respond to the (sometimes conflicting) comments of five referees in addition to those of the associate editor when I was revising the manuscript prior to its final acceptance. In philosophy it is typical to be required to respond to the comments of only two referees when being asked to revise a manuscript prior to resubmission.

14. Lawrence Nelson, “A Crisis for Women’s Rights? Surveying Feticide Statutes for Content, Coverage, and Constitutionality” University of Denver Criminal Law Review, Vol. 6, 2016, 63-99.

A comprehensive survey of the statutory and case law of all 50 states regarding feticide (the wrongful killing of an unborn human at any point in gestation or prior to gestation expressly made criminal by statute); a survey and analysis of the litigation challenging the constitutionality of feticide statutes; an examination of 4 distinct constitutional problems with feticide statutes (unequal treatment of the unborn, misapplication of supposed implications of such states in other legal contexts, their application to extracorporeal human embryos, and their application to pregnant women’s behavior outside of a legal abortion); and a moral justification for such statutes. Approx. 272 references, 271 footnotes, approx. 17,700 words (excluding substantive footnotes).

The University of Denver Law School is ranked 67th by US News. Its Criminal Law Review is a national publication that is peer-reviewed and edited, as are all American law reviews, by law students with faculty assistance; acceptance rate & impact factor: n/a. This journal is in a specialty area (criminal law) that is not evaluated and ranked as are general law reviews.

15. Lawrence Nelson, “It Matters that Prenatal Humans Are Not Constitutional Persons,” American Journal of Bioethics, vol. 16, #2, 2016, 15-17.

Commentary on H. Minikoff & M.F. Marshall, “Fetal Risks, Relative Risks, and

Relatives' Risks," American Journal of Bioethics 16(2):3-11, 2016. 11 references, approx. 1600 words.

16. Report of Panel Discussion among Lawrence Nelson, A. Caplan, and R. Scott, "The Ethical Implications of Preimplantation Genetic Diagnosis," Clinical Chemistry, vol. 60, #1, 2014, 25-28.

Brief comments on the title subject from three bioethics experts. 5 citations.³

17. J. Brinkmann, R. Sims, Lawrence Nelson, "Business Ethics Across the Curriculum?" Journal of Business Ethics Education, vol. 8, January 2011, 83-104. [As this paper was not actually accepted in final form and published until late 2011, it was not listed on my annotated CV that accompanied my application for tenure and was not available to the senior faculty or the accompanying R&T process.]

A peer-reviewed journal, acceptance rate not available, impact factor 1.326, published by Neilson Journal Publishing, has an international editorial board and is the only journal dedicated to the teaching of business ethics. The Australian Business Deans Council Journal Quality List for 2016 places it in about the top 50%. Full text PDF downloads in 2018: 8488 I was responsible for creating about 30% of the text (outside of the pilot study) and for making the revisions suggested by the referees. The article is primarily about the process of teaching business ethics.

18. Lawrence Nelson and Brandon Ashby, "Rethinking the Ethics of Physician Participation in Lethal Injection Execution," Hastings Center Report, vol. 41, #3 (May-June 2011), 28-37.

Peer-reviewed journal with an acceptance rate of 10%, ranked 3rd among ethics journals and 1st among medical ethics journals which has the highest Journal Influence Index in both categories and is the top journal in my field of bioethics. The original idea for the article was mine, and I wrote about 85% the manuscript and was responsible for putting the manuscript into final form after receiving comments from the referees and the editors. Mr. Ashby generated the remainder of the text and assisted in the research of the medical literature relevant to our subject. This paper started as a collaboration with Mr. Ashby (the SCU valedictorian in 2009) when he was an undergraduate and was finished after his graduation while he was attending graduate school in philosophy at Oxford University. This research was supported by a FSRAP grant and a faculty research grant from the Department of Philosophy. The paper, while taking no position on the ethics of the death penalty itself, argues that the mainstream ethical position against physician participation in executions is inadequate and that the case in favor of participation is sufficiently strong that the profession ought to allow physicians to participate if they conscientiously choose to do so. The subject of this paper fits in with my ongoing scholarly interest in the role of conscience in the professional practice of medicine. 6 citations.

18. Lawrence Nelson, "If These Walls Could Talk' and Abortion," in The Picture of Health: Medical Ethics at the Movies, Oxford University Press, 2011, 336-340.

I was invited to submit this essay by the primary editor, Dr. Henri Colt, a pulmonologist and clinical professor at UC Irvine School of Medicine, probably because of my longstanding work in bioethics. This short paper is an examination of a film, "If These Walls Could Talk," that I use in my teaching of bioethics, and of ethics and gender, for its ethical content and pedagogical utility.

19. Lawrence Nelson, "Of Persons and Prenatal Humans: Why the Constitution Is Not Silent on Abortion," Lewis and Clark Law Review, vol. 13, #1, Spring 2009, 155-207.

As law reviews are edited by law students with broad assistance from law faculty, this article did go through a form of peer review; the Lewis and Clark law school is currently ranked in the top third of ABA accredited law schools, and its Law Review accepts about 5% of all submissions. The article develops a theory of constitutional personhood to argue that the U.S. Constitution is not silent on abortion (as argued by Justice Scalia, inter alia) because unborn humans must either be constitutional persons or not and, either way, their constitutional status has a direct effect on the constitutional permissibility of induced abortion. This article will provide a foundation for my future work on the legal and moral status of the unborn, and is related to my interest in creating a philosophical theory of moral status. A search of law reviews on LexisNexis found 7 references to this article; Google Scholar search: 5 citations.

20. Lawrence Nelson, "United States Law and Managing the Terminally Ill Fetus and Newborn." Seminars in Fetal and Neonatal Medicine, vol. 5, 301-304, 2008.

Articles for this journal are edited by an authority on the subject of the particular issue, in this case, David Field. Its acceptance rate was not made available to me. This invited article examines the main legal and ethical issues relating to abortion of fetuses with lethal anomalies and forgoing medical treatment of critically newborns.

11. Lawrence Nelson and Michael Meyer, "Confronting Deep Moral Disagreement: The President's Council on Bioethics, Moral Status, and Human Embryos," The American Journal of Bioethics, vol. 5, #6, 33-42, 2005.

Peer-reviewed article in a journal ranked 4th among ethics journals and 2nd among medical ethics journals. Its acceptance rate was not made available to me. Prof. Meyer and I shared all of the work on this paper equally. The paper analyzes the Council's report on the moral status of human embryos and criticizes the Council for not making better use of publicly available reasons and moral status theory in justifying its various conclusions. A search of law reviews on LexisNexis found 1 reference to this article; Google Scholar search: 21 citations.

12. Lawrence Nelson, "Is There an Indication for Ethics Evidence? An Argument for the Admissibility of Some Expert Bioethics Testimony," The Journal of Law, Medicine & Ethics, vol. 33, #2, 2005, 248-263.

Peer-reviewed article in a journal with an acceptance rate of 15% and ranked 10th among ethics journals and 6th among medical ethics journals. This invited paper, part of a collection of essays on bioethicists as expert witnesses, makes a case for distinct limits on the use of bioethicists as expert witnesses in litigation. Google Scholar search: 2 citations.

13. Lawrence Nelson, "Ethics Consultations Reduce Time and Procedures in Intensive Care," Evidence-Based Healthcare, vol. 8, #2, April 2004, 63-64.

A short, invited article on empirical research related to the effectiveness of clinical ethics consultations in reducing utilization in ICUs.

14. Lawrence Nelson, "The Wendland Case: On Families and Fantasies," Lahey Clinic Medical Ethics, vol. 10, #2, Spring 2003, 8, 10.

Invited article in a regular publication (circulation 27,000) of the Lahey Clinic, a large teaching hospital affiliated with Tufts University School of Medicine; the paper is about the California Supreme Court's opinion in Conservatorship of Wendland; I was the attorney for Rose Wendland, the wife of a seriously brain damaged patient, in litigation over her power as her husband's conservator and next of kin to refuse medical treatment on his behalf; the Wendland case had an important, although quite limited in scope, impact on the national jurisprudence related to the so-called "right to die."

15. Lawrence Nelson, "Preimplantation Diagnosis," Clinics in Perinatology 30 (March 2003) 67-80.

Invited article in a medical journal published by Elsevier, an international publisher of science and health information, a survey of the ethical problems raised by preimplantation genetic diagnosis (see related entry 2 above); a search of law reviews on LexisNexis found 1 reference to this article; Google Scholar search: 5 citations.

16. Lawrence Nelson, "Respect for the Developmentally Disabled and Forgoing Life-Sustaining Treatment," Mental Retardation and Developmental Disabilities Research Reviews, 9 (2003) 3-9.

This article appeared in an issue devoted to ethics and developmental disability and edited by a leading bioethicist, Robert Nelson (no relation), who reviewed and accepted it; the journal's content is intended for use by scientists and clinical practitioners in the field of developmental disability; the paper argues that incompetent, developmentally disabled patients have a right to receive respectful medical treatment and to have it withdrawn or withheld when doing so is consistent with their best interests; Google Scholar search: 4 citations.

17. Lawrence Nelson, "The Wendland Case" in Ethical Issues in Modern Medicine (6th ed.), B. Steinbock, J. Arras, & A. J. London, eds., McGraw Hill, 2002 (in Part 3, Section 4 "Choosing for Others"), 353-356.

The editors of this undergraduate/graduate bioethics textbook invited me to submit this piece on the Wendland case (see entry 14 above).

18. Lawrence Nelson, "Wendland and Forgoing Life-Sustaining Treatment for the Incompetent," The Health Lawyer, vol. 14, #3, April 2002, 12-18.

Invited article in a publication of the Health Law Section of the American Bar Association; a summary and critique of the California Supreme Court's opinion in Conservatorship of Wendland (see entry 14 above); a search of law reviews on LexisNexis found 1 reference to this article. .

19. Michael Meyer and Lawrence Nelson, "Respecting What We Destroy: Reflections on Human Embryo Research," Hastings Center Report, vol. 31, #1, Jan/Feb 2001, 16-23. Reprinted in At Issue: Human Embryo Experimentation, Gale Group, 2002. Excerpted and reprinted in C. Coleman, et al., The Ethics and Regulation of Research with Human Subjects, Newark: Matthew Bender, 2005.

Peer-reviewed journal, very highly ranked (see entry 7 above); this paper applies Mary Anne Warren's criteria for moral status to extracorporeal human embryos and argues that such embryos have a modest moral status that permits them to be destroyed for good cause and with moral respect; Prof. Meyer and I shared all of the work on this paper equally; a search of law reviews on LexisNexis found 4 references to this article; Google Scholar search: 39 citations.

20. Lawrence Nelson and Ronald Cranford, "Michael Martin and Robert Wendland: Beyond the Vegetative State," The Journal of Contemporary Health Law and Policy, 15 (1999) 427-453.

A law review article published by the School of Law at The Catholic University of America (see entry 9 above regarding law reviews); Catholic University law school is currently ranked in the top 40%; this article discusses the ethical and legal problems surrounding forgoing life-sustaining medical treatment of persons in the minimally conscious state and distinguishes this group of patients from those in the permanent vegetative state; I wrote the great majority of the text of this article with Dr. Cranford contributing many ideas and some portion of the text; a search of law reviews on LexisNexis found 8 references to this article; Google Scholar search: 23 citations.

21. Lawrence Nelson, "Bioethics and the Clinician's Conscience: Editor's Introduction," HEC Forum, vol. 10, #1, March 1998, pp. 2-8.

I was the Guest Editor of this thematic issue, "Bioethics and the Clinician's Conscience"; this is an international peer-reviewed publication for members of hospital ethics committees, but in part due to its relatively narrow focus, it is not generally considered a top tier bioethics journal; this article introduces the articles in the issue and offers a preliminary analysis of the ethical foundations of the exercise of conscience in clinical practice.

22. Lawrence Nelson & Mary Faith Marshall, Co-Principal Investigators, Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Substance Abuse Policy Research Program, Grant #030790 for $99,600, on a project entitled "An Ethical and Legal Analysis of State-Compelled Loss of Liberty as an Intervention to Reduce the Harm of Perinatal Substance Abuse and Drug Addiction," 12/1/96-7/31/98. Final report from this project, entitled "Ethical and Legal Analyses of Three Coercive Policies Aimed at Substance Abuse by Pregnant Women," published and released to the public on 8/12/98 at a national press briefing, National Press Club, Washington D.C.

Although not published by an established press, this report has been cited frequently in the bioethics literature (see e.g., ACOG Committee on Ethics Opinion #321, 11/2005

*[http://www.acog.org/from_home/publications/ethics/co321.pdf]; Philip Jos et al, "Substance Abuse During Pregnancy: Clinical and Public Health Approaches, Journal of Law, Medicine and Health Care, vol 31, 340, 2005; Lynn Paltrow, "Pregnant Drug Users, Fetal Persons, and The Threat to Roe v. Wade," Albany Law Review, vol. 62, 999, 1998-99. I wrote the legal sections of the report (about 55% of the total) while Prof. Marshall wrote those on ethics (about 45%). The report criticizes use of the criminal law or child abuse/neglect law to punish women who take both illegal and legal drugs during pregnancy and urges that the* state use a public health approach instead; a search of law reviews on LexisNexis found 7 references to this article. .

Lawrence Nelson, Cynda Rushton, Ronald Cranford, Robert Nelson, Jacqueline Glover, & Robert Truog, "Forgoing Medically Provided Nutrition and Hydration in Pediatric Patients," The Journal of Law, Medicine & Ethics, 23:1 (Spring 1995) 33-46. Reprinted as edited in Compendium of Resources for Pediatric Hospice Care, National Hospice Organization, 1999.

I did the legal and ethical research for this paper, and wrote around 80-85% of the text with Dr. Rushton writing the remainder; the other authors contributed clinical information for some of the case studies and helped edit the text; we sought them as co-authors in part to show that the paper represented a consensus among a variety of individuals involved in pediatric bioethics as well as general bioethics; see entry 12 above for information about this peer-reviewed venue; this article claims that despite widespread clinical reluctance to do so, it is ethical to forgo medically provided nutrition and hydration in pediatric patients in certain types of cases identified in the article; a search of law reviews on LexisNexis found 1 reference to this article; Google Scholar search: 54 citations.

24. Lawrence Nelson, "Medical Futility and the Clinician's Conscience," in Health Care Crisis? The Search for Answers, R. Misbin, et al., eds. University Publishing Group (1995) 60-70.

This article was accepted for inclusion in this book after being submitted to a peer-reviewed competition; the paper argues that medical futility is a morally legitimate ground for clinicians to conscientiously refuse to provide certain interventions.

25. Mary Faith Marshall & Lawrence Nelson, "Update on Criminal Prosecution of Substance Abusing Pregnant Women," BioLaw 5:3-4 (March-April 1995) 17-19.

A short analysis of recent cases; Dr. Marshall and I shared the work equally.

26. Lawrence Nelson, "The Mother and Fetus Union: What God Has Put Together, Let No Law Put Asunder?" in The Beginning of Human Life, F.K. Beller and R.F. Weir, eds. Kluwer Academic Publishers (1994) 301-317.

Invited article in a book focused on ethical and legal issues involving unborn humans; it proposes that the state should not force medical treatment or other interventions upon pregnant women for the sake of their fetuses using the common law and in the absence of a constitutionally valid statute; a search of law reviews on LexisNexis found 2 references to this article. .

27. Lawrence Nelson. "Effects of Changes in Health Care Financing and Allocation of Resources," AACN Clinical Issues in Critical Care Nursing, 5:3 (August 1994) 357-359.

Short invited article.

28. Lawrence Nelson, "Effects of In Utero Exposure to Street Drugs: Ethical and Legal Problems; Recommendations for Changes in Legal Practice," American Journal of Public Health, 83 Supp. (December 1993) 29, 32.

Short invited article in a journal ranked in the top 15% of public health journals.

29. Lawrence Nelson, "Legal Dimensions of Maternal-Fetal Conflict," Clinical Obstetrics and Gynecology, 35:4 (December 1992) 738-748.

Article in a medical journal ranked in the top 25% of OB/GYN journals invited by the guest editors of an issue devoted to bioethics, Profs. Chervenak and McCullough; a search of law reviews on LexisNexis found 1 reference to this article; Google Scholar search: 9 citations.

30. Lawrence Nelson & Robert Nelson, "Ethics and the Provision of Futile, Harmful, or Burdensome Treatment to Children," Critical Care Medicine, 20:3 (March 1992) 427-433.
Peer-reviewed article in the 2nd ranked journal in critical care medicine; Dr. Nelson (no relation) and I shared the research and writing of this paper equally; a search of law reviews on LexisNexis found 7 references to this article; Google Scholar search: 56 citations.

31. Lawrence Nelson, "Intervention Does More Harm Than Good," Journal of Interpersonal Violence 5:4 (December 1990) 530-532.
Short invited article on the use of the criminal law to address prenatal substance abuse by pregnant women.

32. Lawrence Nelson, H. Westley Clark, Robert Goldman, & Jean Schore, "Taking the Train to a World of Strangers: Health Care Marketing and Ethics," Hastings Center Report, 19:5 (Sept./Oct. 1989) 36-43.
Peer-reviewed journal, very highly ranked (see entry 7 above); I wrote about 75% of this paper with Dr. Clark writing the remainder; Mr. Goldman and Ms. Schore contributed information and practical applications about health care marketing and helped edit the manuscript; a search of law reviews on LexisNexis found 2 references to this article; Google Scholar search: 13 citations.

33. Lawrence Nelson & Ronald Cranford, "Legal Advice, Moral Paralysis, and the Death of Samuel Linares," Law, Medicine & Health Care, 17:4 (Winter 1989) 316-324.
This is the predecessor journal to The Journal of Law, Medicine and Ethics (see entry 12 above); I did all of the research and wrote about 85% of the text of this paper with Dr. Cranford writing the remainder; the paper criticizes the legal advice given by a hospital attorney that led to a father taking a gun to the PICU in order to have his nearly brain dead son taken off the ventilator; a search of law reviews on LexisNexis found 3 references to this article; Google Scholar search: 26 citations.

34. Lawrence Nelson, "Law, Ethics, and Advance Directives Regarding the Medical Care of AIDS Patients," in The Meaning of AIDS, E. Juengst and B. Koenig, eds. (New York: Praeger Pub., 1989), pp. 94-100.
Invited article in one of the first books about ethics and AIDS.

35. Lawrence Nelson, "Perinatology/Neonatology and the Law: Looking Beyond Baby Doe," in 1988 Year Book of Perinatal/Neonatal Medicine, 5-10 (M. Klaus and A. Fanaroff, eds.), Year Book Medical Publishers 1988.
Invited article in a yearly medical publication about the ethics and law pertaining to forgoing medical treatment of critically ill newborns.

36. Lawrence Nelson & Nancy Milliken, "Compelled Medical Treatment of Pregnant Women: Life, Liberty, and Law in Conflict," Journal of the American Medical Association, 259 (February 19, 1988) 1060-1066.
Peer-reviewed article in a general medical journal ranked 2nd with an acceptance rate of around 6%; I did almost all of the ethical and legal research for this paper and wrote some 85% of the text with Dr. Milliken writing the remainder; the article argues that the law ought not to compel competent pregnant women to undergo treatment for the sake of their fetuses and that physicians ought not to seek such legal intervention; a Google Scholar search indicates that this article has been cited by 70 others; a search of law reviews on LexisNexis found 20 references to this article; Google Scholar search: 70 citations.

37. Lawrence Nelson, "How Should Ethics Committees Treat Advance Directives?" Hastings Center Report 18 (August/September 1988) 26-27.

Short invited article.

38. Lawrence Nelson & H. Westley Clark, "AIDS Confidentiality: An Ethical Dilemma," California Physician 3 (December 1986) 19-21.

Short invited article; I wrote some 60% of the text with Dr. Clark writing the remainder.

39. Lawrence Nelson, Brian Buggy & Carol Weil, "Forced Medical Treatment of Pregnant Women: 'Compelling Each to Live as Seems Good to the Rest'," Hastings Law Journal, 37 (May 1986) 703-763.

A law review article published by the Hastings Law School (see entry 9 above regarding law reviews); Hastings Law is currently ranked 42nd; this article discusses the legal and ethical problems with using the common law to force treatment on pregnant women; I did about 75% of the research for this article with Ms. Weil doing the remainder, and wrote about 80-95% of the text with Dr. Buggy writing the section on clinical obstetrics; a search of law reviews on LexisNexis found 39 references to this article; Google Scholar search: 124 citations.

40. Lawrence Nelson, "The Law, Professional Responsibility, and Decisions to Forgo Treatment," Quality Review Bulletin, 12 (January 1986) 8-15.

Invited article in a publication of the Joint Commission on the Accreditation of Hospitals.

41. Lawrence Nelson & John Mills, "Ethics and Research Involving Religious Celibate Groups," Clinical Research, 26 (October 1978) 322-329.

This journal is now called the Journal of Investigative Medicine and is the publication of the American Federation for Clinical Research, and it is ranked in the top 50% of medical research journals; Dr. Mills and I shared equally in the writing of this paper which one the Nellie Westerman Prize for Research Ethics in 1978.

42. Lawrence Nelson, "Primum Utilis Esse: The Primacy of Usefulness in Medicine," The Yale Journal of Biology and Medicine 51 (November/December 1978) 655-666.

Article in a journal reviewed and edited Yale biomedical faculty and students.

Google Scholar search: 15 citations; Nexus Uni search: 1 citation; PubMed search: 2 citations.

Short invited article in a leading nursing journal.

b) Artistic Performances and the Like

The full length play I wrote during my sabbatical leave in 2015-16, Cross My Heart, under the direction of the Theatre Department's playwriting instructor, Brian Thorstenson. It was performed as part of The New Playwrights' Festival at the University on May 29, 2016 with SCU student actors, Michael Zampelli, S.J. as director, and Aldo Billingslea as assistant director and actor. I participated in all of the rehearsals. The writing of this play was a formal part of my scholarship plans for my 15-16 sabbatical leave as listed in my approved application. The current text of this play can be found in Scholarly or Creative Work section of my application as can letters from Profs. Thorstenson and Billingslea regarding my work on the play.
